

Guy Kirk is a Senior Lecturer based in the Faculty of Health and Life Sciences within the Social Work and Communities Department. He is a member of the 'Newcastle YOT and the Department of Social Sciences, Northumbria University Partnership Steering Group'. As a qualified and registered social worker Guy is keen to ensure that what we teach on the Social Work Programme is relevant and informed by evidence based practice. Being part of the steering group allows him to keep up to date with both 'real life' practice developments and also to contribute to discussions about research initiatives that might further enhance our understanding of how best to support and work effectively with young people who offend. In addition to this, for some years now, he has enjoyed working with YOT staff delivering an interactive, fun and engaging session to students on the Social Work Programme which helps them to understand Youth Justice Legislation and the role of the YOT in relation to young people who offend.
